PASTOR DECLARES TIME IS NOT RIPE FOR GREAT SPIRITUAL AWAKENING

While Christians Are in a State of Expectancy, Presbyterian Minister Believes They Are Not Willing to Devote Themselves Unselfishly to Service of Church—Says Naturalism or Denial of Divine Agency Is Alarming Peril.

While recognizing the need for a religious revival in this city the Reverend Perry V. Jenness of the Kirkwood Presbyterian Church said yesterday that the time is not ripe for a great spiritua awakening.

Mr. Jenness is one of the foremost min isters of the city. In speaking on the subject of revivals, he said:

"Apparently St. Louis is not in the proper condition for a great religious move ment. Unquestionably the need is great but there does not seem to be the willingness on the part of the majority of professed Christians to devote themselves unselfishly to Christian service. Nevertheless, the history of the past gives striking testimony that God is sovereign and that when his time comes the people will be speedily prepared."

He said that the Christian people of the country are in an attitude of expectancy, as is evidenced by the prayer meetings. the prayer bands and the personal work now going on in the interest of the church. There is, he said, also a greater willingness on the part of the secular press of the country to recognize the ethical value of a religious awakening. The time also warrants a revival because of the outspoken defiance of rationalistic criticism. It is also true that the history of the past shows that revivals always follow times of intellectual activity.

COMPARES RELIGIOUS REVIVALS. At the meeting of the Presbyterian ministers yesterday morning Mr. Jenness compared the present religious movement with that of the Eighteenth Century. The with that of the Fighteenth Century. The substance of his theme was that the supernatural manifestation of the spirit is the credential of the church. "Widespread religious awakenings," he said, "that cannot be explained on any other ground have always been God's methods of demonstrating his truth to an unbelieving age. Among scriptural filustrations of this may be mentioned the deliverance from Egypt, the restoration from captivity and the events following Pentecost.

The most familiar illustration from modern history is that of the Eighteenth Century. It was a time of great material prosperity in the English-speaking world and a time of great intellectual activity. Hobbs and Locke made infidelity popular through their philosophy. Gibbon and Hume added their voices to these choruses. Hume added their voices to these choruses against Christianity, while among states men Bollingbreke end Shaftsbury contributed their powerful influence to chill the sparitual atmosphere with their unbelict. The church for a time was apparently helpless. Then it was that God demonstrated his power by means of the great revival of 150. Three men, who were to be leaders in this movement on both sides of the sea, were born in the same year-180. John Wesley, in England; Jonathan Edwards in Connecticut, and Gilbert

Tennent in Ireland. George Whitefield was born eleven years later. The effect of the great awakening of 1760 was momentuous. The tide of skepticism was turned in England and America. In France, where infidelity was allowed to grow, its fruitage was seen in the revolution. The revival paved the way for foreign missions, Sunday schools and Christian colleges."

NATURAL 1884

NATURALISM ALARMING PERIL Mr. Jenness contended that the conditions to-day in the church are practically the same as those that preceded the revival of the Eighteenth Century. "The alarming peril of our day," he said, "is naturalism, the denial of all direct divine agency and control. Science is uniting with unbelief to rule a personal God out of the universe. The drift toward materialism demands the supernatural as its corrective. If ever men need to be confronted with the fruits of power above nature, that time is now.

"We have good reasons for thinking that God is thus speaking in the Welsh revival to the Christians of the world. The origin of the movement there was superhuman. No organization, no evangelist, no great preacher, but it is the presence of the holy spirit in mighty power that attracts. Concerning this revival, W. T. Stead has written: It is all very wonderful; something almost cerie in its suggestiveness of the presence of another whom no eye can see, but who moves on the wirgs of the wind. Who can say to what this may not grow?

"Have we not here God's answer to a rationalistic age? The alture of Jehovah are affame with the fires from heaven as never before. The world must see and acknowledge its divine source." tions to-day in the church are practically
